Hanes, Arthur J. “Art” Papers, 1960-1963

Background:

A native of Birmingham, Alabama, Arthur J. Hanes was a graduate of Woodlawn High School and Birmingham-Southern College. Following college Hanes worked as a teacher and football coach before joining the U.S. Immigration Service. With the outbreak of World War II, Hanes volunteered for the Navy and commanded a PT boat in the South Pacific.

After the war Hanes used funding from the G.I. Bill to attend the University of Alabama Law School and coached football at Tuscaloosa County High School. After graduating law school in 1948 Hanes became an agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, serving at offices in Chicago and Washington, D.C. He resigned from the FBI after three years and returned to Birmingham to work for Hayes Aircraft Corporation, eventually assuming the post of plant security manager.

Hanes was appointed to the Birmingham Board of Education in 1958 and elected mayor of Birmingham in 1962. His brief tenure as mayor included the period of Birmingham's 1963 civil rights demonstrations. Hanes left office in May of 1963 after a referendum to change Birmingham's form of government eliminated his office.

After leaving office Hanes worked as an attorney in Birmingham and briefly represented James Earl Ray, the man convicted of murdering Martin Luther King, Jr.
